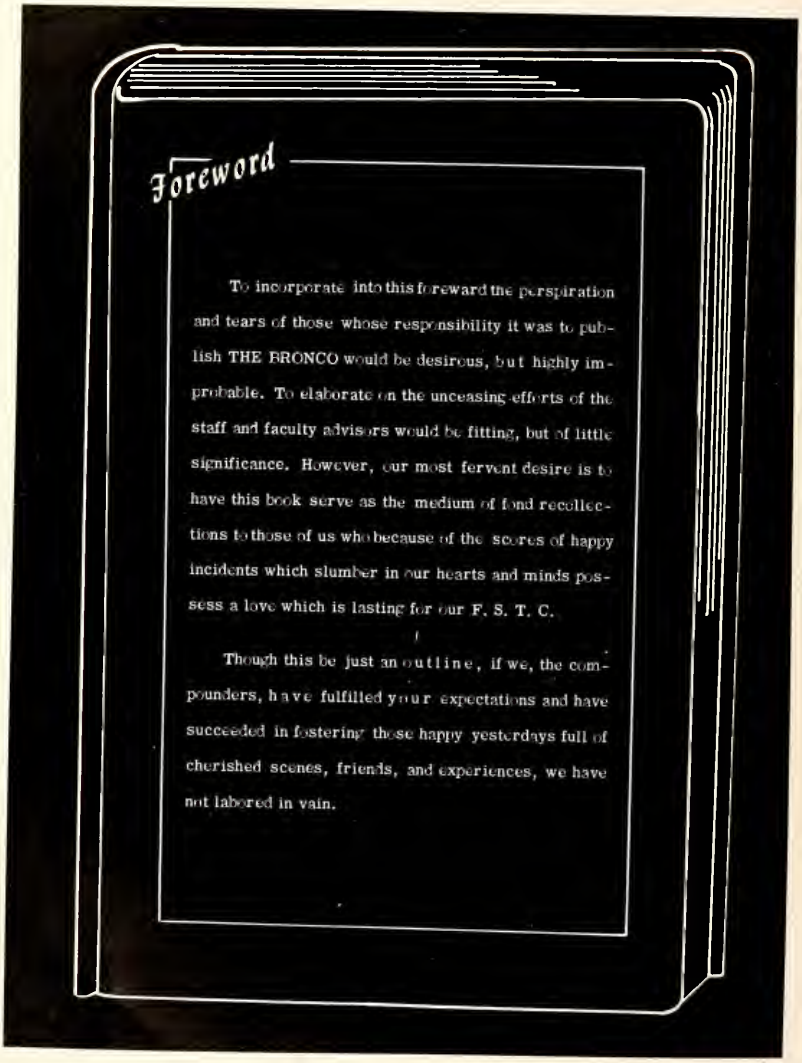
FAYETTEVILLE STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

FAYETTEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA



Foreword
To incorporate into this foreward the perspiration and tears of those whose responsibility it was to publish THE BRONCO would be desirous, but highly improbable. To elaborate on the unceasing efforts of the staff and faculty advisors would be fitting, but of little significance. However, our most fervent desire is to have this book serve as the medium of fond recollections to those of us who because of the scores of happy incidents which slumber in our hearts and minds possess a love which is lasting for our F. S. T. C.
Though this be just an outline, if we, the compounders, have fulfilled your expectations and have succeeded in fostering those happy yesterdays full of cherished scenes, friends, and experiences, we have not labored in vain.

Message From Our President

Dr. Rudolph Jones

Congratulations to the Yearbook Staff for your enthusiasm, initiative and effort in the publication of this yearbook. In future years students will recall fond memories of the profitable years spent at dear old Fayettevile State Teachers College as they turn the pages of the 1958 edition of THE BRONCO. As you reminisce while observing the pictures of former schoolmates and teachers, may you always be inspired to live nobly and to render unselfish service to all humanity. I bid the seniors Godspeed. They have our best wishes for continued success.

Books, like friends, should be few and well chosen. Like friends, too, we should return to them again and again - for, like true friends, they will never fail us - never cease to instruct - never cloy -

Next to acquiring good friends, the best acquisition is that of good books. - Colton.

THE VOICE

"DIGEST OF STUDENT OPINION"

From The President's Desk

To the Students of Fayetteville State Teachers College . . .

As you near the close of the first quarter of another school year it is time to pause in your busy schedule and ask yourselves a few questions. Are you getting all out of your college life you expected to get? If not, did you ever stop to think it might be your own fault? Are you keeping physically fit? Are you choosing the right courses? Are you budgeting your time properly with the right balance between work and recreation? Are you spending too much time in extra-curricular activities? Are you using your natural abilities to its full capacity?

...And Thus It Began

It was during the nineteenth century that a group of Negroes, refusing to exist in the mist of complacency, pondered restlessly; their undeveloped but nurtured proposal led to an agreement to erect for their children a school. However, to accomplish this feat, it was essential to have a leader. To whom shall we turn? It was obvious; A. J. Chestnutt, Thomas Lomax, G.W. Granger, Sr., M. N. Leary, Jr., Robert H. Simmons, Nelson Carter, and David Bryant. "They'll be our trustees," was the voice of the group.

Together the trustees purchased a pair of lots for one hundred thirty-six dollars, from R. H. Simmons and H. C. McNeal. In the fall of 1867 there came into existence one more institution to aid in the fostering of the ideals of the educator; in commemoration of General O. O. Howard of the Freedmen's Bureau, the building erected on these lots bore his name. In less than a decade after its establishment the first principal, Robert Harris, performed what we could call a miracle. For achieving such progress Governor Vance was more or less obligated to present to the legislature a proposal that provisions be made for the training of colored teachers in the state of North Carolina. Following a lengthy debate, a favorable report was brought back by Governor Vance, who personally inspected the Howard School. It was decided to locate the teacher training institution in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Robert Harris, principal, was elected to establish the curriculum of the newly instituted Howard School, which as a result of the Legislative Act of 1877, was renamed the State Colored Normal School. In 1880, Charles W. Chesnutt received the principalship of the State Colored Normal School because of the death of Robert Harris. After rendering three years of service, Chesnutt resigned to practice law in Cleveland, Ohio. The task of administration was then thrust upon the shoulders of Ezekiel E. Smith, who served until 1888, and then resigned later to serve in the same capacity.

Presidents of this institution included:

G. H. Williams, 1888-1892
Dr. Smith, 1892-1898
R. E. Fairly, 1898-1899

President Smith again came to office. Under his administration a program of scholarship and expansion was embarked upon. Fifty acres of land was purchased; on this site, on Murchison Road, was erected Aycock Hall; two years later Vance Hall was constructed. As the school expanded, student enrollment soared higher, and that in turn created a need for a larger faculty and staff. Progress flourished abundantly during the administration for our notable Dr. J.W. Seabrook, who succeeded Dr. Smith in 1933. Advocating what he termed "the 3 E's" (Excellence, Energy, Enthusiasm), he has contributed much to the establishment of what is now known as Fayetteville State Teachers College. Most of the buildings now standing on this campus were erected during the administration of Dr. Seabrook.

Four years after Dr. Seabrook acquired the position of president of the institution. The Board of Education authorized the initiation of a course of study that would lead to a bachelor's degree in education and a class "A" certificate. On November 29, 1947, two years following the authorization, the Class "A" rating was granted the school by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Worn but by no means weary, Dr. Seabrook relinquished his position and went into retirement in 1956. Under the present administration of Dr. Rudolph Jones, Commercial Education, Auto Mechanics and a Marching Band have been added to the curriculum. Here the history of Fayetteville State Teachers College rests, however, only until the abstract once more becomes concrete and the hand again picks up the pen to move on.
